

MEXICAN PRISONER OF WAR SWIMS FOR LIFE
FROM MAN-EATING SHARK—STORY INSIDE

THE DAY BOOK

An Adless Daily Newspaper.

N. D. Cochran,
Editor and Publisher,

398

500 South Peoria St.
Tel. Monroe 353.

VOL. 2, NO. 239

Chicago, Wednesday, July 9, 1913

ONE CENT

DEPARTMENT STORE OWNERS MADE TO SEEM PERJURERS BY TRIBUNE

*But They're Not—Bless Your Heart!—They Never
"Opposed" Unions—They Just Hate 'Em So Bad It Makes 'Em Bilious.*

Henry M. Hyde, who writes articles for the Tribune with one hand and runs a farm in Virginia with the other, stated in the Tribune yesterday that "the State Street department stores are opposed to the formation of unions among their employees."

Now, since Henry M. Hyde, heretofore has spoken with a tongue of brass, in the name of the business men, this statement, coming from him, was indeed interesting.

There was a time when The Day Book itself was fully convinced that "the State Street department stores are opposed to the formation of unions among their employees."

But that, of course, was before the high-minded multi-millionaires who own the State Street department stores took the stand and swore before God that they did not and never had opposed the formation of unions among their employees.

It would hardly be meet for anyone, without definite proof, of course, to believe that such honorable gentlemen of business as Dapper Jimmie Simpson of Marshall Field & Co., Joe Basch of Siegel Cooper & Co., Ed Lehmann of The Fair or John T. Pirie of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co. had perjured themselves.

Such indeed, is almost impossible of belief. Surely such honorable gentlemen as these would not perjure themselves before a commission in the name of the people over such a simple little matter as this.

Wherefore, was Henry M. Hyde's article in the Tribune so highly interesting, especially since Hyde always heretofore has spoken by, with and from the business, and the Tribune is so business-like a newspaper.

So a reporter for The Day Book,